Dear Representatives Smith and Larson:

The Center for American Progress Action Fund is pleased to submit our comments in support of progressive, revenue-enhancing, and simplifying tax reform. We propose a federal tax reform plan that raises adequate revenue progressively while making the tax system more efficient, simple, fair, and comprehensible.

Our current tax system falls short in three key ways. First, federal revenue levels today are at their lowest level since the 1950s, and our tax system does not raise sufficient funds to pay for critical public investments or to protect our most vulnerable citizens. Second, our tax system has become less progressive over the past several decades, with the highest-income households enjoying substantial tax cuts even as their incomes have risen. Third, our tax code is too complex and contains too many narrowly targeted special-interest breaks.

The Center for American Progress Action Fund recommends a tax reform plan that addresses these failings. Our plan redesigns the income tax code so that it will generate adequate levels of revenue to meet our crucial goals, raises this revenue in a progressive way by asking those in the top income brackets to pay more, simplifies the filing process, and streamlines the code. Specifically, we support the top marginal tax rate on personal income of 39.6 percent, a top marginal tax rate of 28 percent on capital gains as it was under President Ronald Reagan, converting tax deductions to tax credits, closing tax loopholes, simplifying the tax system by reducing the number of filers who itemize, and repealing the alternative minimum tax.

While a specific set of policy proposals for your consideration is outlined below, our principal view is that a financial transactions tax would bring in much needed revenue, while stabilizing markets and encouraging long-term investments.

We offer the following recommendations to you as the chair and vice chair of the Financial Services Tax Reform Working Group:

- Financial transactions tax: We recommend implementing a financial transactions tax—a miniscule fee applied to the trading of stocks, bonds, and derivatives in the U.S. financial markets. A financial transactions tax would bring in much-needed revenue, help stabilize volatile financial markets, and incentivize investors to hold financial assets for longer periods of time, which is better for financing businesses and for stable sustained economic growth. At least 23 countries around the world—including international financial centers such as the United Kingdom, Switzerland, Hong Kong, and Japan—already implemented a financial transactions tax.

Any plan for balanced and realistic deficit reduction must include progressive tax reform. We urge the committee to embrace a tax reform plan that asks those who can most afford it to bear their fair share of the burden while protecting seniors, the middle class, and those striving to get into the middle class.

The Center for American Progress Action Fund thanks you for your consideration of our views on tax reform. We welcome the opportunity to provide additional information or to discuss our recommendations in greater detail.

Sincerely,

Michael Linden
