

January 5, 2011

Dear Member of 112th Congress,

We congratulate you on your election victory, and we look forward to working with you in the 112th Congress to enact policies that strengthen America's economy and create jobs. International trade and investment are critical to achieve these goals and are some of the most important issues that you will face as a Member of Congress.

The United States is the world's largest economy and the largest exporter and importer of goods and services. International trade and investment are critical to America's prosperity — fueling economic growth, supporting good jobs here at home, raising living standards and helping Americans provide for their families with affordable goods and services. Participation in international commerce raises the pay scales for millions of U.S. jobs and saves the average American household thousands of dollars per year.

But don't just take our word for it, look at the numbers. Here are eleven reasons why pro-growth trade and investment policies and agreements are good for America:

11. The United States is the world's number one manufacturing nation in the world, according to the International Yearbook of Industrial Statistics 2010 by the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO). Contrary to the claim by some that America doesn't make anything anymore, America continues to lead the world in manufacturing, with 19 percent of the worldwide value-added manufacturing output. Approximately 22 percent of all U.S. manufactured products is exported, and the United States is the world's third largest exporter of goods.
10. The United States is the world's number one services exporter and has been since services trade data have been tracked. Services account for 78 percent of U.S. GDP and about 80 percent of U.S. employment.
9. U.S. agricultural exports support nearly a million jobs in the United States. Agriculture exports have rebounded sharply from the recession and USDA forecasts that they will reach a record level of $126.5 billion in fiscal year 2011. Free Trade Agreements (FTAs) are critical to our continued success. Unless the United States continues to open new markets around the world, we will lose our market share to competitor countries.
8. 95 percent of the world's consumers lives outside the United States. America's industries and jobs simply cannot grow if America does not do a better job of reaching the world's consumers through trade and investment.
7. Over the past 25 years, the United States has implemented FTAs with 17 countries around the globe. While those countries represent just 7.5 percent of global GDP, these FTA countries purchased more than 40 percent of U.S. exports in 2009. Some of these countries are small, but FTAs make big markets even out of small economies.

6. Since the creation of the WTO in 1994, U.S. exports of goods and services have doubled to more than $1.5 trillion, with manufacturing, agricultural, and high technology exports growing by 65, 40, and 67 percent, respectively, between 1995 and 2007.
5. Academic research has confirmed that countries that have more open economies and that engage in international trade enjoy higher growth rates and faster reductions in poverty than more closed economies. In fact through this recent financial downturn, it is U.S. exports that have saved the economy from going into another recession. The World Bank has also determined that over the past two decades, those developing countries that engaged in trade enjoyed the fastest growth in wages. Since World War II, no nation has prospered without taking advantage of opportunities to trade. Meanwhile, hardworking American families benefit directly from imports because imports help to provide access to a wider variety of lower-priced consumer products. Imports also support millions of U.S. jobs in retail, research, design, sourcing, transportation, warehousing, marketing and sales.
4. U.S. exports to China have quadrupled over the past 15 years. Since China's accession to the World Trade Organization (WTO) in December 2001, trade between the United States and China has tripled, and U.S. exports to China have grown at five times the pace of U.S. exports to the rest of the world. China is now the 3rd largest market for U.S. exports. And though more work needs to be done to open China's market further; U.S. companies are making the most of the opportunities that currently exist.
3. U.S. companies with overseas investments account for 45 percent of all U.S. exports, according to data from the Bureau of Economic Analysis. U.S. investment overseas is a magnet for U.S. exports, helping U.S. companies to better access foreign markets.
2. The relative importance of trade to the U.S. economy has also increased. Trade supports 38 million jobs in the United States — more than one in five American jobs. Nearly 18 million of these U.S. jobs depend on trade with America's free trade agreement partners. Twenty years ago, the total value of U.S. exports and imports amounted to 17 percent of America's GDP. In recent years, trade has accounted for as much as a quarter of our economic output.
1. The United States remains an economic phenomenon, with annual output exceeding $14 trillion – greater than the total output of the next five most productive economies combined. This unprecedented economic success is not due to the size of the U.S. population or its natural resources – other countries have more – but to the free-market principles and policies around which the economy is organized. Free trade is a critical ingredient in that proven recipe for prosperity.

Because international trade and investment are vital to growing the American economy and creating new jobs, they must be a focus of bipartisan cooperation between Congress and the Administration. We strongly urge the 112th Congress to pursue trade and investment policies and agreements that will help American companies and workers to remain the most competitive in world. A great first step would be for Congress to consider and approve pending trade initiatives, such as the free trade agreements with Korea, Colombia and Panama. We look forward to working with you on these and other important economic growth and job creation issues in the 112th Congress.

Sincerely,

2nd Solutions
