Thanks--Don't know why I thought it was a [REDACTED]--maybe answer would be the same. Don't think I want to be on stage with Grassley on this issue.

It is, and yes. Your and Grassley's invitations were placed in each other's envelopes.

Not sure we should send to exam. I think the offer to pay for Grassley's wife is income to Grassley, and not prohibited on its face (Grassley is neither an officer, director or other insider to the organization, which is [REDACTED]). We would need to wait for: (i) Grassley to accept and attend the speaking arrangement, and (ii) then determine whether [REDACTED] issues him a 1099. And even without the 1099, it would be Grassley who would need to report the income on his 1040. Either way [REDACTED].

Is this the one where we got the copy to Grassley? Did he get one to me?
Looked like they were inappropriately offering to pay for his wife. Perhaps we should refer to Exam?

Dawn, Here is the correct letter inviting Lois to speak at the [REDACTED] seminar.

From [REDACTED] Sent: Monday, December 03, 2012

Hopefully you have received it from [REDACTED]. An additional copy is attached.

Thank you for your good humor under embarrassing circumstances!

PS What happened to the Longhorns? The Alamo Bowl isn't all that bad, but they had opened the season with such great prospects. Still, it will be an easy commute.

[REDACTED],

It was a pleasure speaking with you. Since I already have your email address, I thought I would email you from mine. Please send the .pdf directly to me and I'll see that Lois receives your letter.

Thanks,
Matthew
